JENNIE BAXTER: JOURNALIST

BY ROBERT BARR

An Unlooked For Encounter.

"Well, this is jolly," he said. "Yes," murmured Jennie, "it's very nice. I always did enjoy foreign travel. especially when it can be done in luxury; but, alas, luxury costs money, doesn't it?"

"Oh, you don't need to mind! You are rich. "That is true. I had forgotten all about it."

"I hope, Jennie, that the fact of my traveling on a train de luxe has not deluded you regarding my wealth. I should have told you that I usually travel third class when I am transporting myself in my private capacity. I am wringing this pampered elegance quarter.' from the reluctant pockets of the British taxpayer. When I travel for British government, I say, as Pooh Bah said to er not have Mr. Hardwick meet us." Koko in 'The Mikado,' 'Do it well, my boy,' or words to that effect." "Indeed," laughed Jennie, "I am in a somewhat similar situation—the newspaper is paying all the expense of this trip, but I shall insist on returning the money to The Bugle now that I have failed in my mission.

"Dear me, how much more honest the newspaper business is than diplomacy! The idea of returning any money never even occurred to me. The mere suggestion freezes my young blood and makes each particular hair to stand on end motto in the service is, 'Get all you can and keep all you get.""

"But, then, you see, your case is different from mine. You did your best to succeed, and I failed through my own choice, and thus I sit here a traitor to my paper."

"Well, Jennie," said the young man, picking up the dispatch box, which he never allowed to leave his sight, and, placing it on the table, "you've only to say the word, and this contentious letter is in your possession again. Do you regret your generosity?"

"Oh, no, no, no! I would not have it back on any account. Even looking at the matter in the most materialistic way, success means far more to you than it does to me. As you say, I am rich; therefore I am going to give successes of their lives. A woman's career so often is merely of incidental inwhole life."

"What a pity it is," mused the young man, "that one person's success as the price of your failure. You have another person." actually succeeded, while I have actually failed. "Excellent," replied Jennie. "Nevertheless I cannot help feeling just a little sorry for poor Mr. Hardwick."

"Who is he-the editor?" "Yes. He did have such faith in me that it seems almost a pity to disappoint him."

"You mustn't trouble your mind about Hardwick. Don't think of him at all. Think of me instead.

It was the chagrin that my uncle Jimmy would have felt had I failed that put the drop of bitterness in my cup of sorrow when I came to my senses after my encounter with the Russian police. That would have been a stunning blow to Sit James Cardiff. We shall reach Charing Cross station about 7:80 tonight, and Sir James will be there with his brougham to take charge of me when I arrive. Now, what do you say to our settling all this under the canopy of Charing Cross? If you telegraph Mr. Hardwick to meet us there, I will introduce him to Sir James, and he will

WEST POINT HAZING.

Brother of Booz Testilles Before Military

Court of Inquiry. West Point, N. Y., Dec. 28.-There was an unusually large attendance of spectators at the military court of inquiry yesterday. Horace C. Booz, a civil engineer of Buffalo, and P. O. Phillips of East Cleveland were the chief witnesses. The former's testimony was principally a refutation of the statements made about his brother, former Cadet Oscar L. Booz of Bristol, Pa., who died recently. Several of the cadet witnesses during the progress of the investigation accused Booz of having shown cowardice in his fight with Cadet Keller in August, 1898, and they also accused him of untruthfulness.

One of the witnesses at the morning session informed the court that he had seen Cadet Breth so far exhausted form severe exercising that never have any more trouble in that stimulants had to be given him in his tent in 1897.

In the afternoon two other cadets of Breth's class said they had seen him in a nervous condition, his body, "Of course not," answered the man arms and legs twitching after he had quickly. WINE OF CARDU A LITTLE DOES MUCH.

BOONE, IOWA, Dec. 14. No tongue can tell what I have endured in the past ten years with my monthly sickness. While suffering untold agony, a friend called and recommended Wine of Cardui. I sent for a bottle, and Ohl what relief. After the first dose I began to feel better and have had no pain since.

MRS. GRACE LAMPHERE.

Wine of Cardui not only cures but it acts AT ONCE. Here is a case of ten years' standing, and yet one single dose made the sufferer feel better, and stopped the pain. The Wine goes straight to the seat of the trouble. It acts directly upon the menstrual and genital organs. Its action is not violent, and it does not force a result. It simply gives Nature that little assistance that the sufferer's system lacks. A single disorder in the feminine organs spreads many disorders all over the body, and when the Wine cures the source, all the other ills vanish as a matter of course. A woman can be her own physician and cure herself at home. Local ex-
